Q: best approach for multi-dimensional math? I'm developing a game in javafx. I've noticed that when you're working with many different types of objects, especially mathematically, it's hard to remember all the operations that have to be applied. I can't find any good resources to help me understand the math behind it. I've learned that a matrix is basically a 2-dimensional array, but I've noticed it in many other games, including minecraft. In math I learned that you can multiply three dimensional arrays together, or multiply three
