Possible Duplicate: Difference between static and synchronized in java? What is the difference between using static and using Thread safe in java? And when should we use static and when should we use Thread safe? A: Static == Singleton Thread safe == Thread-safe A: When a class is declared static, all instances of that class share the same "global" properties. You generally want the global properties to be immutable, i.e. if you have a class: public class Person { public final String name; public final int age; public Person(String name, int age) { this.name = name; this.age = age; } @Override public String toString() { return String.format("%s %d", name, age); } } then: public class Run { public static void main(String[] args) { Person old = new Person("Joe", 100); System.out.println("Person address: " + old); Person newPerson = new Person("Mr Smith", 42); System.out.println("New person address: " + new
