REPACK-KaOs Á [P3D] Prepar3D V4 Professional Plus 4.0.23.21468 Prep4der Á we have Á .bar{v}_z|^2|v_z|^2)(1+frac{1}{v_z}+frac{1}{bar{v}_z}).end{aligned}$$ The $|v_z|^4$ term also shows a kink for wave-like solutions, as pictured in the right panel of Fig. \{fig:Vn\}. In summary, we have obtained two complete families of quantum thin-sheet solitons, namely, breather and kink-breather solutions that are both axially modulated ($F(r)$ and $F(r+v_z)$). They are *self-compensated*, as reflected by the cancellations in the energy. This result can be considered as a particular case of a recent advance in the study of multicomponent thin-sheet Bose-Einstein condensates [1], where it was shown that, under special circumstances, two-component solitons can be treated as a single object. conclusion ===== The main physical findings of this work are the following: (i) New exact quantum thick-sheet soliton solutions have been found and shown to be stable. They can be called nodeless or *dressing*, quantum solitons, as they are supported by a periodic potential $V$ having the fundamental Floquet theorem (i.e., robustness) and a weight function that is decoupled from the width $\sigma$. These solitons are exact solutions of the scaled coupled NLS, and one can think of them as solitons created by a *virtual* particle trapping/de-trapping process. Although, so far, the numerical simulations have not been explored to study the propagation of these objects, it is expected that they have the same stability properties as their $|v_z|^2$-profiled counterparts. (ii) A fairly simple form for a highly nontrivial weight function of potentials supported by lattices with two or three bands is obtained. Our method can be generalized to construct solutions that may also take more complicated forms,
