The person in question, a mother-of-one who has not been named, has been identified as the winner of a Â£37 million jackpot on Wednesday after they correctly chose all six numbers drawn in the EuroMillions draw. The unnamed woman is believed to have checked their ticket immediately after the draw and found the winning number. The jackpot was won with the five correct numbers and one miss, and all six numbers were drawn live on air. The lucky number in the lottery draw was 27 and the three lucky numbers were 13, 28 and 30. Misses 11, 14 and 16 also fell in on Wednesday's draw but they will not be paid for as they were drawn with the last number. According to the draw's rules, any winnings must be claimed within three months of the draw date and not disclosed to others. The lucky winner was not asked to keep the news quiet to avoid creating a public buzz. Nick Bayliss, of the National Lottery's draw security team, said: "It's quite extraordinary that a winning ticket of this value - and in such a reputable game - has been bought without the joy of a newspaper splash, radio, television or online announcement. "That said, we understand the winner's sense of privilege to have won such a prize." The National Lottery's security team said that it was aware that several winning tickets have been sold this week but it was believed that they were all communal tickets that had only been purchased by people who had looked at each other's tickets 1cdb36666d

Photoprint 8.0.Slideshow (2 images) WASHINGTON (Reuters) - President Donald Trump made clear on Tuesday that he wants to build a wall along the U.S.-Mexico border, undercutting a key pillar of his message for the mid-term congressional elections in November. Trump said a wall was necessary to deter people from crossing the border illegally, though he cautioned that a wall was just one part of a broader plan to make the border safer. "Building a wall is just a part of the equation," Trump told reporters in the Oval Office after signing an executive order to nominate a new member of the Federal Election Commission. Trump did not elaborate on what the administration would offer for other border security measures, instead saying he would work out his message over the next couple of weeks. "We want to get it done and it's going to be done very quick," he said. The $25 billion plan for building

The results of long-term follow-up. To assess the outcome of patients with chronic peripheral occlusions of arteries of the lower extremities after recanalization therapy. Percutaneous transluminal recanalization was performed in 62 patients with chronic occlusions of the lower extremity arteries, the average duration of occlusion was 33 +/- 16 months, and clinical follow-up was performed for a mean of 24 +/- 8 months. Initial success was achieved in 55 patients (89%). Success was reestablished in 47 of 53 patients (88%) after successful recanalization and 8 patients (15%) were either unsuccessfully recanalized or required secondary surgical correction. No patient had limb loss. Recanalization was performed through the femoropopliteal artery in 39 patients, the femorofemoral artery in 15, the popliteal artery in 5 and thromboendarterectomy was performed in 3 patients. Forty-seven patients had primary patency at 3 and 6 months and at 6, 12 and 24 months, respectively. Patients with occlusions of the femoropopliteal artery (n = 40) and patients with multilevel femoropopliteal or femorofemoral occlusions (n = 9) had a primary patency of 83 +/- 9% and 56 +/- 22%, respectively, at 6 months, 77 +/- 9% and 32 +/- 23%, respectively, at 12 months and 67 +/- 14% and 41 +/- 32%, respectively, at 24 months (p = 0.05). Recanalization is a safe and promising treatment option for chronically occluded arteries of
